

Be a Citizen Scientist

Maureen Loomer enthusiastically shared her experiences as a citizen scientist at our opening meeting October 2020. Not only as she participated in expeditions; she has endowed a scholarship for college students to be able to participate in various citizen science expeditions. Maureen herself is a retired scientist and professor of Biology that has recently attained her Doctorate in Education. If you were inspired by Maureen's experiences, she recommends the following three organizations:

SciStarter is an easily searchable database with links to hundreds of citizen science projects. <https://scistarter.org/>

Earthwatch is the international citizen science organization that I support as a donor as well as a former field volunteer.

<https://earthwatch.org/>

Journey North is an organization to which I submit monarch butterfly and hummingbird data.

<https://journeynorth.org/>